THE MARAUDERS

COOPER, TOM

February 2015
Fiction, Crime
Crown
Hardcover

"THE MARAUDERS is so damned good you won't believe it's a first novel ... and by the time you reach page 20, you won't care. It's rollicking, angry, eye-popping, and fall-on-the-floor funny, sometimes in the course of a single scene. The cast is winning, the post-Katrina bayou setting is richly evoked, the dialogue crackles, and the story rolls on a wave of invention. It's a little Elmore Leonard, a little Charles Portis, and very much its own uniquely American self. Basically, Tom Cooper has written one hell of a novel."

—Stephen King

This dark, strange, and wickedly funny debut crime novel with shades of Carl Hiaasen and Elmore Leonard is set in a small Bayou town that has recently been devastated by an oil spill. The desperate circumstances push the lowlifes who inhabit the town to enact whatever risky schemes they can to reverse their fortunes. At the center of it all is Gus Lindquist, a pill-addicted, one-armed treasure hunter obsessed with finding the lost treasure of pirate Jean Lafitte. His journey brings him into contact with a wide array of memorable characters, including a couple of small-time criminals prone to some truly hysterical banter, the smooth-talking oil company middleman out to bamboozle his own mother, and some psychotic drug smuggling twins who could have walked in off the set of Breaking Bad. Initially, the narrative threads seem entirely distinct, but as the story progresses, the connections become clearer, the tension and action ramp up, and everything begins to come together.

THE MARAUDERS is part pulp fiction and part Southern gothic swamp noir. It's a literary beach read that's compelling, sad, dark, funny, relevant, and meaningful.

Tom Cooper has been published in dozens of literary magazines and journals. His stories have been four times nominated for the Pushcart Prize. He lives in New Orleans.

THE LIBRARY AT MT SAMMICH is a spectacularly creative and assured dark-fantasy debut in which our world becomes the battleground for a family's struggle to inherit godlike powers. Mixing Neil Gaiman and Joe Hill, this smart, truly surprising thriller combines humor and horror and features a wonderful cast of quirky characters, including a heroine whose struggles to regain her humanity, are alternately heartbreaking, funny, and terrifying.

When Carolyn was small, she wondered if the man she and her adopted siblings called "Father" might secretly be God. She was kidding—well, mostly—but no one laughed. By then they had all seen things. Father sometimes raised the dead. He could call light out of darkness. Twenty thousand years ago he crumbled a mountain range to dust with a single word. Now Father is missing, and as his absence stretches out—first weeks, then months—it becomes clear that something is wrong. The sun disappears from the sky. Tigers speak in human voices. Tonight CNN will air a special report on why you must never, ever touch the silver things that slither down the interstates toward the lights of the city. But these are just distractions. If God truly is dead, the only thing in all of creation that matters is who will inherit His library—and Carolyn and her siblings have prepared their whole lives to fight for it. David is fierce. Margaret cannot be killed—at least, not for very long. Rachel's ghost children can whisper any secret ever kept into her ear, if only she thinks to ask. Michael speaks to the forest and, sometimes, it speaks back. Alone or in alliance any of them could seize Father's library and, with it, absolute power over all creation. Carolyn was taught no such tricks. But Carolyn is very clever. And she has a plan...

For fans of Jacqueline Winspear's Maisie Dobbs series, a new historical novel set in 1880s New York City featuring the city's first female detective, a witty, fiery, and daring woman who is desperately trying to solve a murder case involving some of the wealthiest and most prominent men of the day.

Mary Handley is a not your typical late-nineteenth-century lady. She's fiery, witty, daring—and she has a foul mouth that makes her mother cringe. Just days after being fired from her job at the hat factory for insubordinate behavior, she finds herself at the murder scene of Charles Goodrich, the brother of a prominent alderman and a former employee of Thomas Edison.

When Mary proves her acumen as a sleuth, she is hired by the Brooklyn Police Department to solve the crime. As she delves into the mystery, she finds herself questioning the likes of JP Morgan, Thomas Edison, and Nikola Tesla. Mary quickly realizes there is much more at stake than justice, and that catching the killer will be impossible unless she can find Charles Goodrich's journal.

Lawrence H. Levy is an award-winning writer for television and film. This is the first of a two-book deal. The second novel will also feature Mary Handley.

Praise for Shovel Ready

"Bogart-cool . . . Razor-sharp . . . The page-turning mood of Shovel Ready is addictive, by turns death-metal brutal and darkly hilarious" —Entertainment Weekly

The kill-for-hire antihero from Shovel Ready returns in another riveting, twisted, genre-busting novel from Adam Sternbergh.

It's a year after Shovel Ready. Persephone is ensconced with her newborn upstate; Simon the Magician is struggling to keep control of Harrow's evangelical empire; and Spademan has accepted a seemingly routine job: to snuff out a no-good bed-hopper named Lesser. Lesser has been causing headaches all over the limnosphere, racking up enemies left and right. But Lesser comes back from the dream with a wild claim: that the terrorists have found a way to infiltrate the limnosphere, to hijack the luxury virtual escape from the inside. And they're doing it from somewhere in New York. Spademan is not used to having enemies—his foes usually end up dead pretty quickly—but he tries to stay vigilant about the dangers that lurk right under our noses. He's about to find out just how close these new enemies are—and how dangerous they can be.

In his signature deadpan, pared-down style and with a bold, gritty vision of a bombed-out NYC, NEAR ENEMY is a dynamite follow-up to a beloved debut.

Adam Sternbergh is the author of Shovel Ready, which Warner Brothers is developing for the big screen, with Denzel Washington set to star. He lives in Brooklyn with his family. NEAR ENEMY is his second Spademan novel. Visit him at: www.adamsternbergh.com

Educated at Harvard, Dr. Perry Baird was a rising medical star in the late 1920s and 1930s. Early in his career he grew fascinated with identifying the biochemical root of manic depression, just as he began to suffer from the disease himself. By the time the results of his groundbreaking experiments were published, Dr. Baird had been institutionalized multiple times, his medical license revoked, and his wife and daughters alienated from him. He later became one of the first Americans to receive a lobotomy. He died from consequent seizures, his research incomplete, his achievements unrecognized.

Mimi Baird grew up never knowing this story, as her family went silent about the father who was absent for most of her childhood. Decades later, a string of extraordinary coincidences led to the recovery of a manuscript that Dr. Baird had worked on throughout his brutal institutionalization, confinement, and escape. This remarkable document, reflecting periods of both manic exhilaration and clear-headed health, presents a startling portrait of a man who was a uniquely astute observer of his own condition. Dr. Baird had struggled with a disease for which there was no cure, racing against time to unlock the key to treatment before his illness became impossible to manage.

Mimi Baird set off on a quest to piece together both memoir and man. The result of his extraordinary record and her journey to bring his name to light is an unforgettable testament to the reaches of the mind and the redeeming power of a determined heart.

Mimi Baird met a surgeon in 1980 who had once known her father. This meeting prompted her quest to finally understand her father's life and his legacy. This is her first book. Eve Claxton is a writer, researcher, and producer based in Brooklyn. She has been instrumental in creating seven memoirs as a co-writer, and is the editor of The Book of Life, an anthology of memoirs.

RAIN

A Billion-Year-Old Love Story

BARNETT, CYNTHIA

April 2015

Science

Crown

Hardcover

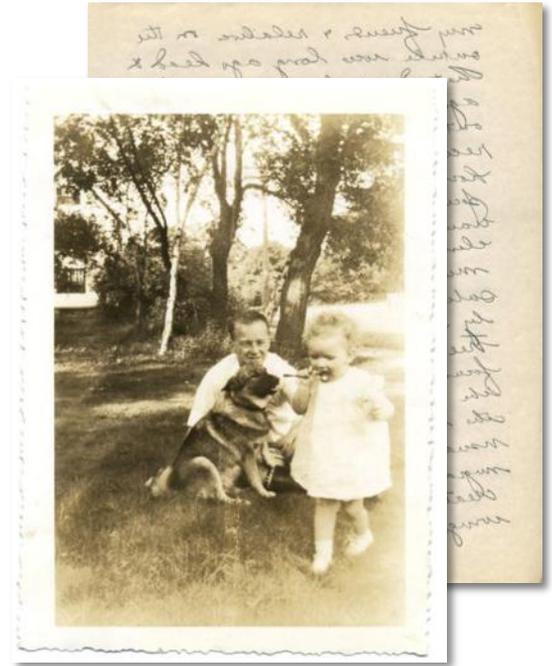

Rights: World

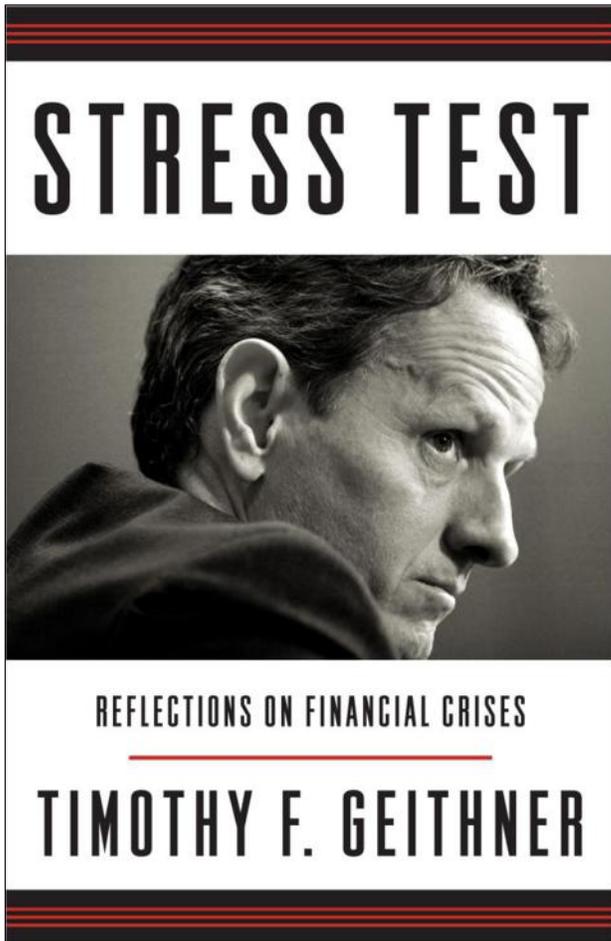

For readers of Michael Pollan and Susan Casey's The Wave, a natural history of rain, told through a compelling, lyrical blend of science, cultural history, and human drama. It is the subject of countless poems and paintings; the top of the weather report and the cause of catastrophic floods; the source of all the world's water. Yet this is the first book to tell the story of rain.

Cynthia Barnett, a science journalist, begins 4 billion years ago with the torrents that filled the oceans to transform a fiery planet into a living one. It explains the science of it--the physics of a rainbow, the true shape of a raindrop--while weaving in the human history, from ancient rain gods and divining rods to modern floodwalls and geoengineering. RAIN is also a love story. For centuries, people have tried to summon it, Thomas Jefferson was obsessed with it, and in these pages, Barnett makes it almost palpable.

RAIN is not only a journey through history but also a travelogue, taking readers to Scotland to tell the story of the mackintosh raincoat and its eccentric inventor, and to India, where villagers extract the scent of monsoon rains and turn it into perfume. Barnett sees rain, from the increasingly severe storms that unleash it to the life-giving freshwater it provides, as a unifying force in our divided culture. Too much and not nearly enough, churning in hurricanes or frozen into icy "snowmaggedons," rain is a conversation we share, and this is a book for everyone who has ever experienced it.

Cynthia Barnett is a long-time environmental and science journalist who has reported on water from the Suwannee River to Singapore. She is the author of Mirage, which won the gold medal for best nonfiction in the Florida Book Awards and Blue Revolution, which was named by The Boston Globe as one of the top 10 science books of 2011. She lives in Florida.

STRESS TEST

STRESS TEST is the definitive insider's account of the American response to the global financial crisis. During his tenures at the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which spanned the Bush and Obama presidencies, Timothy Geithner was tasked with stabilizing the US economy and encouraging growth in rattled markets throughout the world. Decisions were made during the most harrowing moments of the crisis, when policy makers faced historic levels of uncertainty, risked catastrophic outcomes, and had no institutional memory or recent precedent to guide them. Geithner describes the relationships, debates about strategy, and strength of collaboration among key decision makers in the crisis, including Hank Paulson, Ben Bernanke, President Obama, senior White House advisers, and foreign finance ministers and central bank governors.

By describing what went right, what went wrong, and the lessons learned along the way, Geithner aims to answer the most important—and to many the most troubling—questions about the choices he and his colleagues made, the strategies they adopted, and the economic aftermath.

This will be essential reading for anyone seeking a deeper understanding of the worst financial crisis since the Great Depression and its implications for the future.

Praise for City of Scoundrels:

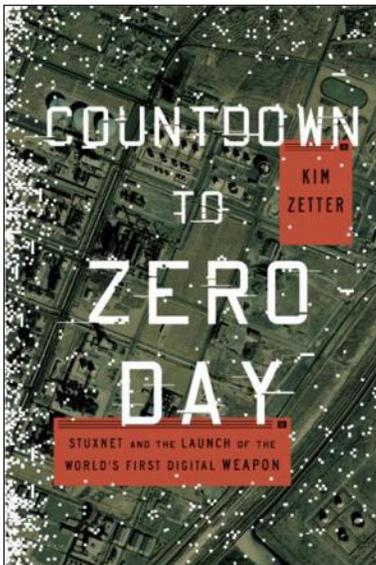

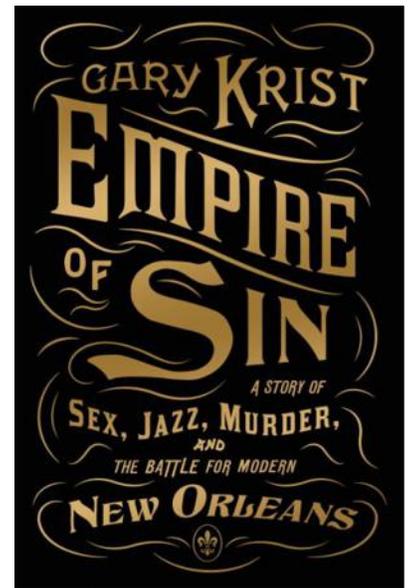

"A lavishly intricate, well-paced account of a great city lashed to the breaking point by a political perfect storm." —New York Times

EMPIRE OF SIN is the vibrant and immersive account of New Orleans's civil war in the early 1920s.

It tells the remarkable story of the city's thirty years' war against itself, pitting the elite against its powerful and long-entrenched underworld of vice, perversity, and crime. At its center is Tom Anderson, the undisputed czar of the city's vice district, who fights desperately to keep his empire intact. Surrounding him are flamboyant prostitutes, crusading moral reformers, dissolute jazzmen, ruthless Mafiosi, venal politicians, and one extremely violent serial killer, all battling for primacy. Packed with marvelous characters—like brothel madams Josie Arlington and Lulu White, jazz musician Buddy Bolden, and Italian mobster Joseph Monfre—and propelled by an axe-murder mystery, this cinematic history reads like an action-packed novel.

This is a must-read for fans of suspenseful historical narratives where the city is a major character such as Devil in the White City and Midnight in the Garden of Good and Evil, and history-comes-alive stories such as Ragtime and The Island at the Center of the World. New Orleans is arguably one of the most intoxicating, culturally rich, beloved cities in the world, and EMPIRE OF SIN brilliantly evokes its lively atmosphere while placing the reader in the throes of the city's most violent and traumatic transition.

Gary Krist is the author of the New York Times best-selling City of Scoundrels (2012) and the acclaimed The White Cascade (2007), as well as several works of fiction. He has written for the New York Times, Esquire, and the Washington Post Book World.

Using the story of the virus that destroyed Iran's nuclear centrifuges as its central narrative, this terrifying book by a top cyber-security journalist shows that this is a new age of warfare—one in which a digital attack can have the same destructive capability as a megaton bomb dropped from a plane.

In January 2010, the International Atomic Energy Agency noticed that Iran's nuclear centrifuges were failing at an alarming rate. What was causing them to do so was a mystery—apparently as much to the Iranian technicians as to the UN inspectors. In June 2010, a seemingly unrelated event occurred. One of the computers in Iran was caught in a reboot loop. Analysts assumed it was infected with a routine piece of malware—but as they delved into its code, they discovered a virus of unparalleled complexity and mysterious intent. Experts around the world were beginning to understand that they had stumbled upon the world's first digital weapon.

Stuxnet was a digital missile unlike any other virus or worm that had ever been built. Rather than simply stealing information or damaging the computers it infected, it managed to physically destroy the devices the computers controlled—and was a weapon that could wreak untold havoc on any country's infrastructure. It was an ingenious plot that proceeded exactly as planned.

Kim Zetter is a senior reporter at Wired covering cyber crime, civil liberties, privacy, and security. This book came out of her original, news-breaking Wired article. She has been covering hacking and computers since 1999, and is considered one of the top journalists in the world on this beat.

In every biography written about the Gucci family, the names Bruna Palombo and Patricia Gucci receive, at most, three or four sentences. That is because their unique story has been kept under wraps until now. For the first time, the once illegitimate daughter of the Gucci founder tells us the Shakespearean family drama that ends with her as the chosen and sole heir of Aldo Gucci.

This story, inspired by the revelation of a chest full of love letters between Gucci and his longtime love, Patricia's mother, will tear down the corporate facades and get closer than any outside biographer ever could. For the first time, viewers will have rare access to the very heart and vision of the fashion dynasty's architect: Aldo Gucci. We witness the remarkable rise, fall, and collapse of this fashion house through the eyes of Aldo's only daughter, who simultaneously tells of the love story between her father and mother—his mistress-turned-wife Bruna Palombo, who is still with us and a major source of information.

It's a universal story of love and family, loyalty and betrayal. The Gucci story is well-documented, but it's never been told like this before. The stories are real but sound like the creation of top fiction writers. Conspiracies to steal control of Gucci by Aldo's brother and sons are set amid the internationally famous murder of Patricia's cousin by his wife, who had set her sights on power and fame. The conviction of Aldo Gucci for tax fraud in the US became top international news, only to reveal that Gucci's own son informed the IRS of the "tax inconsistencies" in his bid to get control of the company. And, finally, the summoning of Gucci's three sons to the hospital where their father, with Patricia and her mother sitting on his bed, informs the sons he has been dying of cancer, unbeknownst to them and their self-centered lives, and proceeds to read his last will, cutting them completely from the family fortune while leaving his entire estate to Patricia.

Patricia Gucci was born in London and is the only daughter of Bruna Palombo and Aldo Gucci. She lives in Switzerland with her three daughters.

Memoir/Cultural Observation
Crown
Hardcover; Rights: World

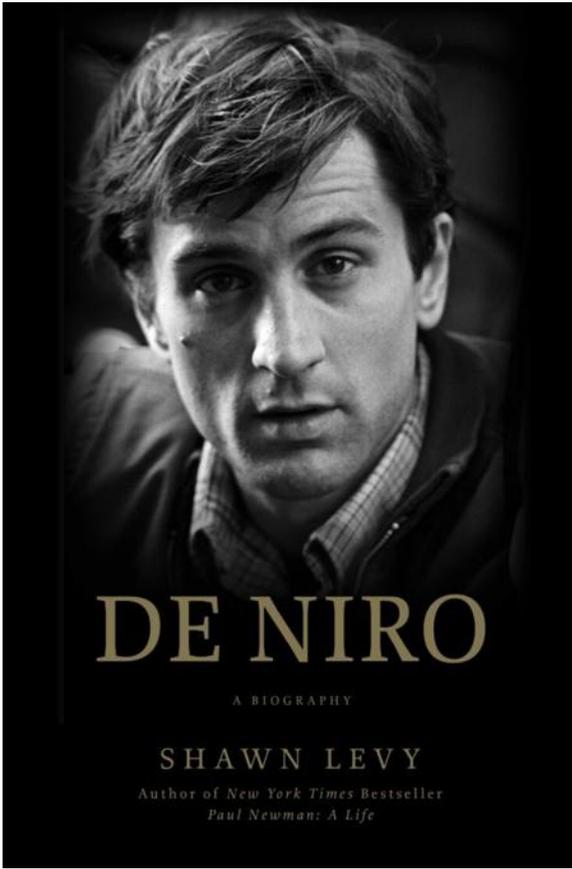

Prizewinning novelist Suki Kim's piercing memoir of six months undercover teaching English to the sons of North Korea's elite—an unprecedented, moving look at the absurdity and cruelty of life in the world's most unknowable country. South Korea-born writer Suki Kim, whose family was divided by the Korean War, left New York for Pyongyang, posing as a Christian missionary in order to become an English teacher at the Pyongyang University of Science and Technology (PUST), North Korea's only private university.

At PUST, both students and staff are forbidden from leaving the campus except on official trips. Suki's students are the privileged sons of the most brilliant politicians, scientists, and physicians in Pyongyang—the future leaders of the totalitarian state—but the idea of traveling abroad or even applying for a job is alien to them. She soon grows attached to her students, trying to expose them to the outside world—introducing them to iPods, study abroad, and Harry Potter. The students, in turn, open up to Suki in their writing and conversations, sharing their anxieties and offering uncensored glimpses into their lives outside the university walls. Then Kim Jong Il dies, leaving Suki's students genuinely devastated, and leaving her to question whether the gulf between her world and theirs can ever be bridged. Courageous and disquieting, this book is a singular account of a dystopian regime, and a beautiful testament to its people.

Suki Kim was born in Seoul and moved to the US at the age of 13. She is the author of the award-winning novel The Interpreter. She has been traveling to North Korea as a journalist since 2002, writing essays and articles for the New York Times, Harper's, and The New York Review of Books.

"[A] sweeping tribute to Newman . . . Levy offers reportage as impressive as his critical analysis. PAUL NEWMAN: A LIFE is a layered and absorbing portrait." —Time.com

Everyone believes that Robert De Niro is one of the greatest actors of all time. His performances, particularly in the first 20 years of his career, are unparalleled. The Godfather Part 2, Taxi Driver, Mean Streets, The Deer Hunter, Raging Bull all dazzled moviegoers. Yet little is known about De Niro the man—he is intensely private, and his rare public appearances are often marked by inarticulateness and all-around awkwardness.

In this elegant and compelling biography, Shawn Levy writes of these De Niros—of the characters and of the man—seeking to understand an evolution of an actor who once used roles to hide the nature of his real life, and who now turns down those parts, instead to play characters who possess little challenge to his overwhelming talent. From De Niro's roots as the child of artists to his marriages and life as a father, restaurateur, and philanthropist, and of course to his current movie career, Levy has written a biography that reads like a novel. Among the many who have been key players in his career are the likes of Martin Scorsese, Francis Ford Coppola, Meryl Streep, and countless others who appear in the book.

DE NIRO is based on never-before-seen archives detailing De Niro's first years as a professional actor, on new information about his family background, and on interviews with friends and colleagues. It is the most ambitious biography of De Niro undertaken.

Shawn Levy is the author of Paul Newman: A Life. He lives in Oregon with his wife and three children.

AMAZING THINGS ARE HAPPENING HERE

MCCARTHY, MATT

Autobiography

Hardcover

Medical school may teach you medicine, but—unfortunately for patients—the only training for being a doctor is on the job. Matt McCarthy's funny, candid memoir about his intern year at a New York hospital is a scorchingly frank look at how doctors are made, taking readers into the critical care unit to see one burgeoning physician's journey from ineptitude to competence.

After his professional baseball career failed to launch, McCarthy went to Harvard Medical School and on to a coveted residency slot in New York. But after almost losing a patient on his first day, he finds himself facing the harsh reality of a new doctor's life—one in which even overachievers find themselves humbled, and in which med school training has little to offer in navigating the emotional rollercoaster of dealing with actual patients.

Luckily for McCarthy, his second-year-resident adviser is an offbeat genius with a knack for breaking down the complicated process of treating patients. But neither doctor can offer much help to a patient named Barney, who has been living in the hospital while waiting for a new heart, and whom McCarthy will slowly befriend over the course of the year in ways that change his perception of what it means to be a physician.

Mixing tense drama and screwball humor, McCarthy offers a window to hospital life that dispenses with sanctimony and self-seriousness while emphasizing the black-comic paradox of becoming a doctor: How do you learn how to save lives in a job where there is no practice? This will inspire and entertain physicians and patients alike.

Matt McCarthy is an assistant professor of medicine at Weill Cornell Medical College and an assistant attending physician at New York–Presbyterian Hospital. He has a degree from Yale and a medical degree from Harvard. His work has appeared in Sports Illustrated and The Atlantic. His first book, Odd Man Out, was a New York Times bestseller.

A FIFTY-YEAR SILENCE

Love, War and a Ruined House in France
RICHMOND MOUILLOT, MIRANDA

January 2015

Autobiography

Crown

Hardcover; 8-PAGE B/W INSERT

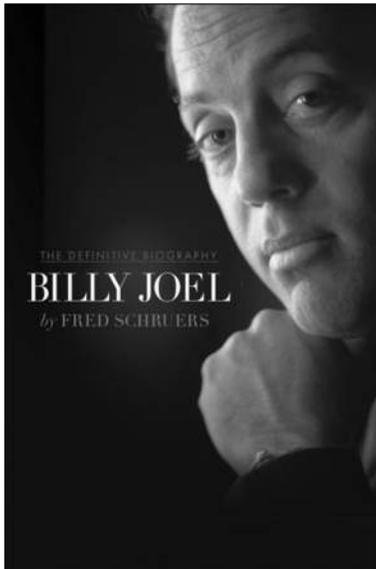

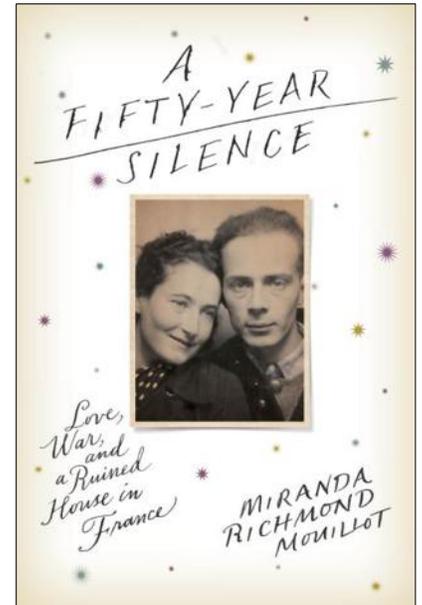

Rights: World

Miranda Richmond Mouillot grew up in a family haunted by the Holocaust and by her grandparents' mysterious estrangement. In 1948, Miranda's grandparents, Armand and Anna, who had survived Nazi-occupied France, bought an old stone house in the south of France. Her grandmother, a physician, and her grandfather, later an interpreter at the Nuremberg Trials, had survived the war in France through a combination of luck and wits. Five years later, Anna packed her bags and walked out on Armand, taking his typewriter and their two children. The two never spoke to each other for the rest of their lives.

No one in the family knew why or dared to unravel the mystery, but Mouillot's curiosity and need to understand her heritage compelled her to break the silence. Why is her grandfather so angry with her grandmother, refusing for 50 years even to utter her name? What created this irrevocable rift between two people who had survived such horrors? The answer lies in her grandfather's participation in the Nuremberg Trials, and all he learns there and cannot leave behind. This memoir tells two stories: that of Mouillot's own life (the journey she undertakes to write this book, including her relationships with her deteriorating grandparents, moving to France to restore their house, and falling in love) and that of her grandparents (their lives together—and apart).

The intertwined narratives form a seamless whole that touches on some very big issues: how history, family, and the individual inform one another; how we write—and rewrite—history to fulfill our own needs; the danger of being consumed by the past; the burden of history, of secrets and silence; and the limits of knowledge and memory.

Miranda Richmond Mouillot currently lives with her husband, Julien, and daughter, Estelle, in a small village in southeastern France, and works as an independent translator, mostly of works in the humanities and social sciences.

The leading advisor on spirituality in America reveals the faulty reasoning, bogus science, and general bad faith prevalent among militant atheists like Richard Dawkins, Daniel Dennett, Susan Blackmore, and Sam Harris. Chopra offers new and provocative ways to understand God and nature of belief in the 21st century.

Over the last five years Chopra and the poster child of the New Atheism, Dawkins, have been in heated debates over God, science, and the future of mankind. Chopra wants to address arguments of overzealous atheism. The book isn't just a discussion over belief systems, it's a stirring call to action for all of us to reevaluate how we look at and live with God in our lives. "If faith can be saved, the result will be an increase in hope," Chopra writes. "By itself, faith can't deliver God, but it does something more timely. Faith makes God possible."

When the hustle and bustle of life sidetracks you from living the way you intend, what can you do to get back on track? If you are the founder of a lifestyle dot.com as well as the daughter of a famous healer, there's all the more pressure to find out. As a mother, wife, and social media entrepreneur, Mallika Chopra frequently wondered how she could possibly do one more thing. Like so many, she was taking lousy care of herself and having a difficult time finding meaning and purpose in each day. In LIVING WITH INTENT Mallika Chopra shares a practical yet deeply personal look at her year-long journey to discover some workable answers. Along the way, she sat down with respected experts, including Andrew Weil, Eckhart Tolle, Gretchen Rubin, Marianne Williamson, Daniel Siegel, and others, who opened up about their own experiences.

THE ADRENAL RESET DIET

Strategically Cycle Carbs and Proteins to Lose Weight, Balance Hormones, and Move from Stressed to Thriving

Hardcover

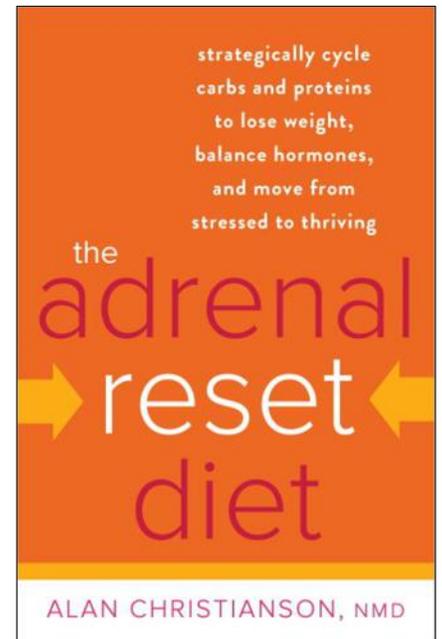

Rights: World

THE ADRENAL RESET DIET is the first science-based and patient-tested plan developed by a natural endocrinologist. Dr. Alan Christianson's method heals readers in any of the three stages of adrenal impairment: Stressed, Wired and Tired, or Crashed. Readers learn their stage and receive distinct strategies for diet, activity, and lifestyle changes to bring them to Thriving.

Science has shown us that fat deposition is a defense mechanism to protect the cells against circulating sugar. The underlying reasons for excessive sugar lie with the core glands of blood sugar control. These include the adrenals, the pancreas, and the liver. When adrenal function is altered, the system compensates with weight gain. This weight gain leads to fatigue and hunger, causing a vicious cycle.

After helping his patients reset their adrenal glands, they typically experience between 5 to 25 pounds of fat loss, diabetes reversal, improved blood pressure, and normalized cholesterol. There is a large interest in understanding hormonal function and Dr. Christianson offers overwhelmed women and men a plan to heal themselves wherever they are in the three stages of adrenal dysfunction.

Alan Christianson, NMD, is based in Phoenix, Arizona, and specializes in natural endocrinology with a focus on thyroid disorders. He coauthored The Complete Idiot's Guide to Thyroid Disease and the ebook original Healing Hashimoto's. In between these works, he authored the chapters "Hypothyroidism" and "Hyperthyroidism" for the Textbook of Natural Medicine, 9th Edition.

THE HAPPINESS OF PURSUIT

Praise for The $100 Startup

"The $100 Startup is a two-fer: It's a kick in the pants to get started on your dream and a road map for finding your way once you begin. If you're not ready to launch your own business after reading this book, you need to go back and read it again!"

—Daniel H. Pink, New York Times bestselling author of Drive and A Whole New Mind

From visionary social entrepreneur and lifestyle architect Chris Guillebeau, author of the New York Times bestseller The $100 Startup, comes a book about finding purpose and meaning by committing to a life-changing project or quest.

Chris Guillebeau specializes in helping people break out of the "box" of their everyday lives. The $100 Startup, explained how to create income on one's own terms and not necessarily abide by a 9-to-5, "work for the man" model. But while liberation from "the grind" is one step in pursuing a life of purpose, it's far from the only way. Indeed, genuine fulfillment typically requires a quest or challenge that is big and ambitious.

Chris has undertaken a successful quest of his own, having visited nearly every country in the world by age 35. But the quests and projects discussed in this book don't need to involve travel at all. What's needed is commitment and progressive accomplishment, losing oneself in a task—whether it be a physical journey, an artistic enterprise, a philanthropic feat, even an act of political protest. Chris has surveyed thousands who've undertaken such quests and really drilled down to:

- Discover how they went about it
- The common mistakes
- What happened when they hit the wall
- How they coped when the quest was over

His specialty is well-researched, easy-to-follow advice that helps readers bridge the gap between "impossible dream" and "everyday reality."

CHRIS GUILLEBEAU is the New York Times bestselling author of The $100 Startup and The Art of Non-Conformity. He is also the creator and host of the annual World Domination Summit, a gathering of ambitious nonconformists and cultural creatives (3,000 attended the most recent Summit, and the waiting list is over 10,000). He is rolling out an additional annual international gathering in March 2014, called Pioneer Nation, which will cater to questing entrepreneurs. Business/Leadership
Crown Business
Hardcover
Rights: World

The founder and CEO of Team Rubicon and ex-Marine sniper applies lessons in leadership and teamwork from the disaster zone and the battlefield to show how to be a "first responder" in business. TAKE COMMAND presents an entrepreneurial approach to leading and succeeding in a world where speed, agility, and a bias toward action are crucial for professional survival.

In our professional lives, most of us won't ever be asked to wrest back a plane from terrorists or rush into a relief zone just decimated by a hurricane. Yet, in today's fast-paced and competitive business climate, we are confronted daily with situations in which the risks are considerable, the information incomplete, and the stakes high. In a world where global competition is fierce and industries are being disrupted overnight, success in business requires a new style of leadership. It requires seeing clearly when others are blinded by fear. Listening to every viewpoint—then making the call and owning it. Jake Wood applies these leadership lessons—gleaned from the front lines of Iraq, Afghanistan, and the disaster zone, as well as from running an organization widely lauded for its innovative management style and superior approach to teamwork—to today's high-stakes business environment.

Jake Wood is cofounder and CEO of Team Rubicon (and former Marine sniper, a unit more elite than the Navy SEALs), a disaster relief organization that unites military veterans with first responders. Since 2010, Team Rubicon has been instrumental in over 40 missions ranging from South Sudan to Missouri to Hurricane Sandy. Wood has been profiled in People, Huffington Post, Time, and Forbes and on CNN and has been named a 2012 CNN Hero and was awarded the 2011 GQ "Better Man Better World" Award.

JOB U

How to Find Wealth and Success Without a Degree by Developing the Skills Companies Actually Need
WYMAN, NICHOLAS

January 2015
Business/Careers
Crown Business
Trade Paperback
Rights: World

JOB U offers millions of unemployed, underemployed, and underskilled workers a new path to job security and economic prosperity by skipping the traditional four-year college degree and instead moving toward a career path that equips job seekers with the practical, technical, vocational skills that today's companies actually need.

Millions of people are unemployed or have given up trying to find work. Meanwhile millions of positions remain unfilled because businesses can't find people with the right skills. The solution to this "job/skills gap," Wyman says, lies in technical and vocational education, community colleges, apprenticeships, and on-the-job training programs. Anyone—from recent high school and college graduates to mid-life career changers—can get a job that is just as fulfilling, challenging, and high in status and pay as those attained through a traditional degree.

JOB U aims to change the conversation about what a successful career path should look like: it is both a treatise and a practical roadmap for how to build the human capital that economies all over the world desperately need.

Nicholas Wyman is the CEO of the WPC Group, a global organization that advises companies such as Nissan, Mercedes Benz, Citibank, and Google on how to recruit, train, and "re-skill" employees. In addition to his consulting work, he travels world-wide full-time speaking to audiences on all sides of this issue: managers, career coaches, HR departments, industry groups, trade associations, think tanks, policymakers, unions, and high school and college graduates. FOOD: A LOVE STORY

GAFFIGAN, JIM

October 2014
Humor
Crown Archetype
Hardcover
Rights: World

In the follow-up to his New York Times bestseller (44 weeks) Dad Is Fat, comedian Jim Gaffigan takes on his favorite topic: food.

Stand-up comedian and New York Times bestselling author Jim Gaffigan has made his career rhapsodizing over the most treasured dishes of the American diet ("choking on bacon is like getting murdered by your lover") and decrying its worst offenders ("kale is the early morning of foods"). Fans flocked to his New York Times bestselling book Dad Is Fat to hear him riff on fatherhood, but now, in his second book, he will give them what they really want—more than 200 pages of his thoughts on all things culinary(ish).

You will learn why he believes coconut water was invented to get people to stop drinking coconut water, why pretzel bread is #3 on his most important inventions of humankind (behind the wheel and the computer), and the answer to the age-old question "which animal is more delicious: the pig, the cow, or the bacon cheeseburger?"

JIM GAFFIGAN is a stand-up comedian, actor, and the bestselling author of Dad Is Fat. He lives in Manhattan with his wife, Jeannie, and their five children.

Rights to Dad Is Fat sold to: Muenchner Verlagsgruppe (Germany).

Multi-hyphenate Mindy Kaling is the author of the bestselling comedy classic Is Everybody Hanging Out Without Me?, an Emmy-nominated writer, the actress famous for playing the beloved Kelly Kapoor on The Office and Mindy Lahari on The Mindy Project, and the author of one of Twitter's most popular feeds. MASTERING GOLF'S MENTAL GAME

LARDON, MICHAEL, with a foreword by Phil Mickelson

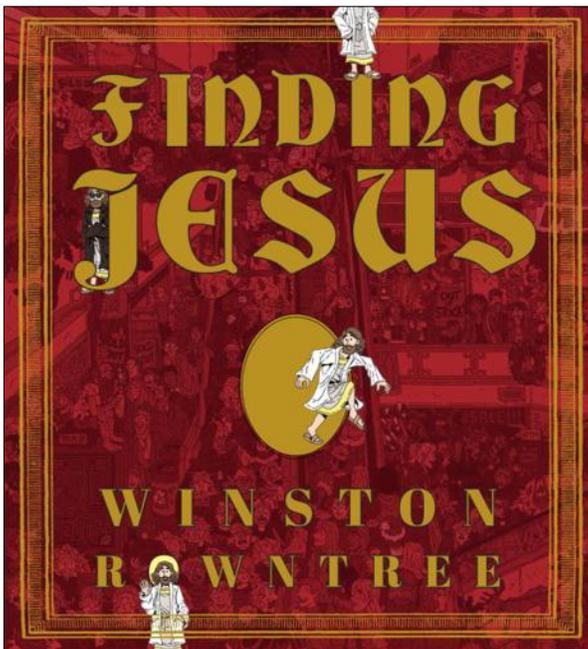

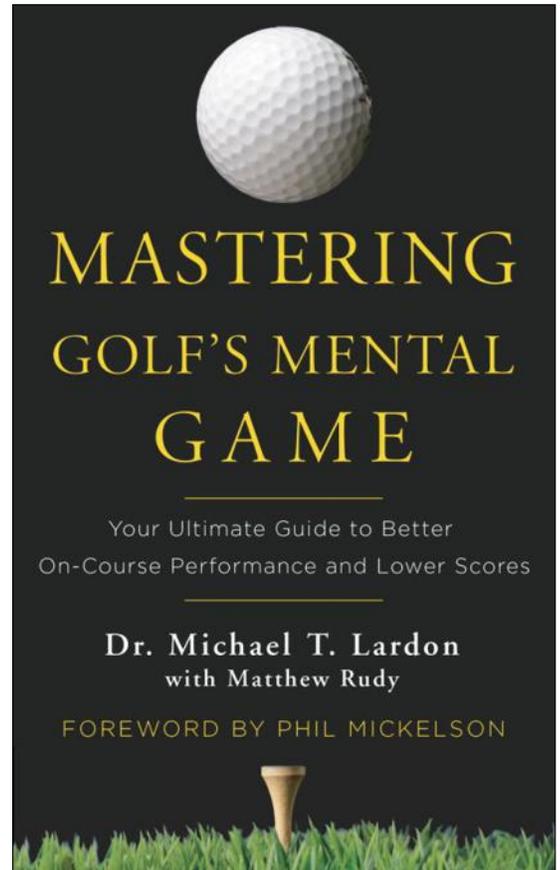

September 2014
Sports/Golf instruction
Crown Archetype
Hardcover
Rights: World

Dr. Michael Lardon is pro-golfer's secret weapon, having devised a mental approach to the game that helped Phil Mickelson win the British Open in 2013. That plan is detailed here, with a book that can follow in the footsteps of Harvey Penick's Little Red Book and Bob Rotella's Golf Is Not a Game of Perfect.

Golfers are forever tinkering with their game, from the basic components of their serving and putting to their mental approach to the game. Almost every professional now uses a golf psychologist, like Bob Rotella, whose books have sold nearly 500,000 copies. Michael Lardon is the new breed in golf psychology. While many golf strategies try to get players to eliminate thinking from their approach, Lardon believes that the entire mind, body, and spirit must be embraced. He perfected a multistep kind of checklist that he believes golfers should employ as a means to eliminating overthinking and succumbing to pressure. This simple step was used by Lardon's star client Phil Mickelson when he won the British Open in 2013. Mickelson, who called the process Golf's Mental Scorecard, will write the foreword for this book.

MASTERING GOLF'S MENTAL GAME will be filled with stories of golfers gone awry and golfers who have gained confidence through this process, as well as other great "rules" that Lardon shares with his clients. A must-have for all weekend golfers, this is the kind of information that can sell forever.

Dr. Michael Lardon is a psychiatrist. He has been working with pro and Olympic athletes for over 20 years, trying to help them attain peak performance. He received a psychology degree from Stanford University and his medical degree from the University of Texas. Dr. Lardon is frequently interviewed by major sports publications such as Sports Illustrated, ESPN magazine, the New York Times, the Huffington Post, Golf Week, Golf Magazine, and Golf World. He is also the author of Finding Your Zone (Perigee).

FINDING JESUS

ROWNTREE, WINSTON

October 2014
Humor
Three Rivers Press
Trade Paperback
Rights: World

A wry homage to Where's Waldo that challenges readers to "find Jesus" in a variety of unlikely places.

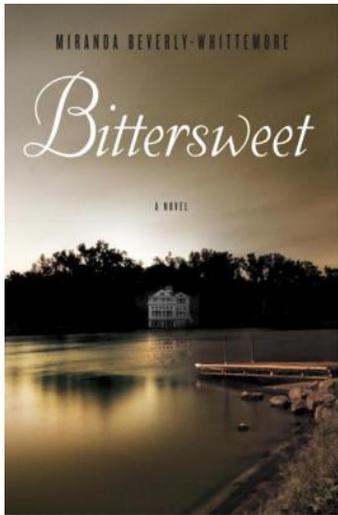

On each page of FINDING JESUS, the Son of God is hidden in a crowded scene—from a rock concert to a wedding to a grocery store. The objective for the reader is to "find Jesus" in the detailed illustrations—and it's not always easy, what with Jesus's propensity for walking on water and turning the other cheek! Darkly funny and pleasantly challenging, this interactive children's book for adults will be enjoyed by believers and skeptics alike.

This is the perfect gift book for lovers of interactive books for adults and for fans of children's book parodies such as Go the F to Sleep and Goodnight iPad.

Winston Rowntree is a columnist at the world's most visited humor site, Cracked.com, which receives 18 million unique visitors per month and has 2.5 million Facebook fans and 760,000 Twitter followers.
