While her friends enjoy life in paradise, she feels drawn to anything that is less than perfect. Like her beloved shells with their cracks, and Sander, the boy who gives her the first kiss. Nature, 4+: ANIMALS IN THE WILD. THE LITTLE BEECH TREE AND HER FRIENDS (VOL. 18) by Friederun Reichenstetter, illustrated by Hans-Günther Döring (ISBN 71514, 40 pages)

The forest smells so good! No wonder that people and animals feel happy there. But why is the forest air so good? And why is the forest so important for us? The forest ecosystem is explained for children aged 4 and above using the example of a little beech tree. The beech's leaf canopy offers protection for forest animals and provides fresh air for everyone. But the beech also depends upon the forest community. When it gets infested with aphids, it is helped by the ladybird. When there's an autumn storm raging, the trees all help protect one another. And when the beech is deprived of sunlight, a nearby mother-beech provides it with food. An insight into the wonderful harmony of the forest – with audio-CD.

- Learn to protect nature, starting with the beech tree. Includes an audio-CD with the story, natural sounds and quizz.
- With ants, centipedes, stag beetles, spotted woodpeckers, brown owls, dormice, foxes, deer and many other important forest animals.

It is difficult for someone to understand in peacetime how a war can affect every aspect of life. Gottlieb is a foundling, traveling through burning Germany in the 1630s with a mercenary army. The Thirty Years' War has the land in its grip. The soldiers kill and pillage at the behest of continually changing masters. There is no end to the war in sight. But Gottlieb retains his humanity. He deserts the army and finds a new home in Ulm. As scribe to the city council he witnesses something no one dared hope for: the peace treaties of 1648. A historical story which presents the most important aspects of this complex war, making the experience of living through war intelligible for young readers.
